'ROUND 'N' 'ROUND

Some of you people may cry about the cold and wind, but there is one boy who lives in our neighborhood who doesn't. In fact, he enjoys the wind.

Yesterday the boy took one of mama's old sheets, rigged up a mast and erected a sail on his coaster wagon. And from after school until dark he enjoyed himself, sailing down Roosevelt avenue.

After seeing this youngster perform in his sail wagon, several other children in the neighborhood got bright ideas and they made sails and used them while roller skating.

Which all comes back to the old bromide, "It's an evil wind—etc., etc., etc."

There is a certain family of whom we know who suffer a complex that would be interesting to some physicians.

This family regularly subscribes for newspapers that carry "Health Columns" written by Dr. Thundersmith.

The mother has taken all of these teachings to heart and has developed aches, pains and groans that correspond with those stated in many of the articles.

She read in one article that lettuce is the best food that one can eat. As a result she has lettuce for breakfast, luncheon, tea and supper. And when the family goes to bed, they eat a midnight meal of lettuce and toast before retiring.

She attended a lecture given by a "Health Expert" who declared that all meats are dangerous and should never be eaten. As a result she fed her family on nothing but vegetables.

Three weeks later she attended another "health" lecture, given by another "expert" who declared that all vegetables are dangerous and should never be eaten. As a result she fed her family on nothing but meat for some time.

A few weeks later she attended another lecture given by another "expert" who condemned vegetables and meats, declaring that fruits are the only foods that should be taken into the system. Then she started feeding her family on nothing but fruits.

As a result, the entire family is suffering from stomach trouble. So she betakes herself to another lecture to find out what was wrong. Here she was told that the aluminum she used for cooking created a toxin that poisoned the whole family. Thus it was that she has taken her complete set of aluminum and has had it done over.

But the family is still suffering from stomach trouble and they are quite mystified. She refuses to go to a doctor about it, but is waiting for another "health lecture." One of these days she is going to hear a real expert and she is going to learn that the main cause of the family ailment is an unbalanced diet.

It's people like these that cause these alleged "health experts" to flourish. There should be a law, or something.

STANFORD MAY JOIN GRIDIRON PROBE

'FIREWORKS' AFTER BIG GAME

BERKELEY, Nov. 14.—UP.—There were indications on the University of California campus today that leaders of the school would like to let the battle of words aroused by University of Southern California's 74 to 0 victory over California stop, until after the big game at least.

Except for a suggestion by R. L. "Dink" Templeton, Stanford track coach, that Stanford join with California in an investigation of conditions existing in Pacific Coast football there was nothing said in northern California to prolong the heated debates that have been taking place.

Prof. W. B. Owens of Stanford, president of the Pacific Coast conference made it clear that Templeton had set forth his individual views and was not representing the university when he spoke at the annual football banquet of the Oakland chamber of commerce.

The future of Pacific coast athletics depends upon an investigation, Templeton said. "Until Stanford and California get a break on athletic material, there is no chance for them to compete with the University of Southern California on an even basis."

"It is high time that Stanford and California get together and find out why this situation has arisen. Why has U. S. C. such athletes and such football players?"

Replying to a statement by Orr Mohler, U. S. C. star, in which the player was reported to have said "I could say a lot of things about California, and offers made, but I'm not going to just yet. Dean Thomas Putnam of California said:

"It seems strange that such a statement should come from Mohler, who is now attending U. S. C."

Dean Putnam was asked to clarify his remarks.

"All we are considering now is to beat Stanford," he said in refusing to do so.

Men will not know until next Monday what price they will be paid for their catch and until that time will be "fishing blind."

The season will continue until June 15 during which time bass and shad will also be caught.

AVIATOR SAFE IN ARGENTINA AFTER ESCAPE

A former Richmond aviator, wanted in this city on a charge of taxiling his plane on the state highway, has escaped from a Chilean prison camp, according to word received from South America yesterday.

Orville de Larm, the aviator, was arrested with a companion by the Chilean government after his plane had landed with a number of rebel leaders near Concepcion, Chile.

de Larm declared that the men were merely passengers, but Chilean officials declared that the aviator was a participant in the recent revolution.

As a result the flier was arrested and sent to the detention camp at Concepcion.

On Nov. 4 de Larm escaped from the camp and fled to Zapala, Argentina where he is safe, reports said. No details of the aviator's escape were given.

de Larm was arrested in Richmond last May and was cited to appear in Justice of the Peace A. A. Alstrom's court on a charge of obstructing traffic.

The arrest here was made by state traffic officers who declared that the flier was taxiling his plane along the state highway near the San Pablo flying field, and was holding up traffic.

de Larm appeared in court and was fined $10, a sum he promised to pay. However, when he failed to send the money to the court, a warrant was issued for his arrest by Judge Alstrom.

OAKLAND, Nov. 14.—Ousted from the police force two months ago for incompetency and misconduct after he was found bound and gagged with his own handcuffs, Russell M. Meinert was in the city prison today while police were investigating automobile registration certificates found in his possession.

Police were called to the Meinert home at 2885 Georgia street by the wife who said her husband was beating her. When officers arrived they found Mrs. Meinert badly bruised, but Meinert was missing.

The ex-policeman came in while officers were at the house, and he was arrested. When questioned about the extra registration certificates he said they were for his automobiles. Police said he had only one car, and that an old one.

Mrs. Meinert told police she had been kept sitting in a chair while her husband brandished a pistol and threatened to "blow her brains out." He then beat her, she said.

When Meinert was discharged he was told that a complaint was also lodged against him by a man under arrest. A motor gauge of rare value was found in Meinert's possession, which was allegedly taken from the prisoner, and no report made to headquarters, regarding the property, police declare.

REBUILDING OF STACK STARTS

Brick masons were today rebuilding a 40-foot chimney blasted to the ground Thursday when an oil furnace in the building at 313 Eighth street back-fired and shook the structure to the ground.

A defect in the chimney was said by Fire Chief W. P. Cooper to have been responsible for the blast, which rocked buildings in the vicinity of Eighth and Macdonald.

Children playing near the chimney when nearly a ton of bricks came tumbling to the ground were not injured. A general alarm was sounded and both fire and police forces responded.

Tenants in the rooming house warmed by the furnace were using oil stoves today until the chimney is repaired and the oil furnace again working.

MOTHER FINDS DAUGHTER AT COUNTY RANCH

MARTINEZ, Nov. 14.—After a two year search a 23 year old mother had her four year old daughter Betty Lou, and was today speeding south to her home in Los Angeles.

The mother is Mrs. Marguerite Magden, daughter of a Los Angeles police sergeant. She had seen her daughter only once during the two years and that time for only half an hour.

Betty Lou was found yesterday on the C. H. Schwartz ranch near Clayton where the husband is employed. With Deputy Sheriffs J. M. Joseph and Clyde Laird, Mrs. Magden went to the ranch and took the child.

Magden was not there at the time. The little girl failed to recognize her mother at first, but soon remembered her from the half hour visit.

The deputy sheriffs did not interfere with the case in any manner except to locate the missing child. No court order has been given to either parent to keep the child.

As soon as Mrs. Magden arrives in Los Angeles she will seek a court order giving the child to her, she said.

Two months ago Magden was located in a San Francisco hotel by a detective agency for the wife, two met and went to Concord where the baby was found. Mrs. Magdensaid she begged her husband to let her take the child with her, but he refused.

Presenters were sent the child addressed to Concord but they were returned, unclaimed, she said. By films and in a carter, she hired the mother saved enough to hire detectives to look for and locate the girl and her father. The finding of the two and reunion with the mother followed.

The girl has been promised a contract in the films, it was said last night.

GUN FIGHT AT LOCAL HOME BRINGS ARREST

James A. Petty, 752 McLaughlin avenue, is in the city jail awaiting appearance before Police Judge C. A. Odell this morning on a charge of assault with a deadly weapon.

The arrest followed a fight last night in which, police say, Otto Fenske, same address, narrowly escaped death of serious injuries.

Police reported that Fenske had ordered Petty to vacate a tent that stood in the rear of his home. Petty refused to do so, and an argument started.

At a late hour last night, so Fenske says, Petty came to his front door with a shotgun in hand and aimed it at him, ordering him to stick his hands up. Fenske grasped the gun barrel and turned it aside. The gun went off and the shots broke a window in the Fenske home.

Mrs. Fenske then called police. Patrolman George Reifschneider was dispatched immediately.

Upon arrival, he said, he found the two men grappling upon the grounds. Petty was holding a small calibre automatic in his hand, during the fight, police say.

Reifschneider, after a short struggle, separated the two men, and placed Petty in handcuffs and took him to the city jail.

Police also declare that they confiscated a number of rifles, shotguns and pistols from Petty's tent. Petty and Fenske are laborers.

His lowest standard is seven hits a game, and his strike-outs have averaged 12 per game. He is now serving creditably with the Richmond V. M. I. Inter-County Baseball league squad.

Babich weighs 150 pounds, is six feet two inches in height, and is seventeen years of age.

NORTHWESTERN MEETS TEST TODAY

CHICAGO, Nov. 14.—UP—The road to football fame is piled high with obstacles and no team knows it more than Northwestern.

Northwestern has a chance to win the Big Ten championship, as well as western and national honors, in its two final games of the season, but the Wildcats have had to overcome one long series of handicaps and unfortunate occurrences to reach their present position among the nation's select group of nine remaining undefeated and untied teams.

Difficulties have beset the Northwestern eleven since the day it opened the season against Tulane, and there is no relief in sight as the Wildcats prepare for their two final tests against Wisconsin Saturday and Notre Dame next week.

These are some of the drawbacks to Northwestern's hopes for an undefeated season.

Wisconsin and Notre Dame both are pointing for Northwestern. Wisconsin had an easy game last week and Notre Dame has one this week.

Northwestern has had to play at top speed in every game this season except against Centre in October, is out for the rest of the year with a shoulder injury. Reuter, figured in 13 of the 21 touchdowns, is out for the rest of the year with a shoulder injury.

Pug Reuter, probably one of the greatest sophomore backs in the west, to say nothing of the country, is out for the rest of the year with a shoulder injury. Reuter, figured in 13 of the 21 touchdowns, is out for the rest of the year with a shoulder injury.

Reuter, Russell, line-ripping fullback, was out for a month because of an eligibility technicality.

Outside blockers for Coach Dick Hanley and players this week have hurt the team's morale. Hanley has had to deny he is considering a job as head coach at California, while the players have been disturbed mentally by the hullabaloo over the Notre Dame game.

Northwestern has yet to be pushed to win a game. Only twice has the Northwestern goal-line been crossed, one by center against a second team and once by Minnesota late in the last period on a 50-yard run. Northwestern has won every game except one by a three touchdown margin after Tulane held the Wildcats to two touchdowns in the first game.

WEISGERBER TO PLAY AGAINST FORDHAM

NEW YORK, Nov. 13.—UP—Mr. Kippling to the contrary, East and West can meet and the two extremes are coming together up at the Polo Grounds tomorrow when St. Mary's of California engages Fordham of New York in a football game.

Never having seen the Polo grounds before, "Ship" Madigan took his California boys to the home of the Giants late this afternoon and let them frolic here and there over the soggy turf. Indications by the way, point to an even more treacherous footing tomorrow.

Madigan didn't ask his boys to do anything in particular. "We're running through signals. He simply told them to get out there and kick the ball, and catch the ball, thus becoming acquainted with the deceptive winds that swoop off Coogan's Bluff and make the catching of punts very difficult.

Speaking of punting, St. Mary's has a young man who positively knows how. Fred Stennett is his name, and he was getting them off for 50, 60 and sometimes 70 yards, which won't hurt St. Mary's chances tomorrow.

If the Californians were tired and worn from their long trip, they didn't show it. Every man on the squad is in top shape, including Adam Weisgerber, regular guard, who twisted his knee in the Santa Clara game.

The Californians felt so good that most of them, after practice, repaired to a hot dog stand across the street and indulged in the heavy fare quite zestfully. Whether or not Madigan knew of this informal dinner was not learned.

Madigan said that a team composed of Ebling and Sperbeck, ends, McNally and Hunt, tackles; Weisgerber and Fisher, guards; Peebles, center, Boyle, quarter, Stennett and Toscani, halves and Barrett, fullback would most likely start against Fordham.

New York Will Wage War On Gang Murders

NEW YORK, Nov. 14.—UP—A determined drive against racketeers and gangsters was announced today as the response of authorities to a brazen series of murders within the past month.

District Attorney Thomas C. Crain, seeking to correct what he termed "a tragic situation," called a meeting at his office for next Thursday afternoon and summoned 50 citizens representing trades and industry which by report have been victimized by racketeers.

The district attorney acted after seeing a computation that showed 89 shootings here in a 30-day period. There were 55 fatalities and in 30 of the assassinations or attempted assassinations racketeers were suspected.

Crain invited the district attorneys of the Bronx, Brooklyn, Queens and Richmond and leaders of bar associations to co-operate with him. Speaking of the "intolerable conditions" Crain said that concerted action was necessary and that it might even be necessary to amend the penal code to gain new legal weapons for fighting the gangsters.

The district attorney and criminologists were inclined not to lay the blame for the growth of racketeering on police. Rattled, they intimated, the responsibility falls on the victims who refused to inform or testify.

While officials were preparing for the campaign to stamp out terrorism, developments occurred in several aspects of inquiries into charges of municipal corruption.

James W. Hennessey, former public administrator of Richmond county, pleaded guilty to grand larceny in connection with the embezzlement of at least $63,000 from the widows and orphans whose estates he was required to administer.

Champion Corn Husker Does His Stuff

NORTON, Kas., Nov. 14.—UP—While 20,000 people stood around the edges of a wide cornfield here today to cheer their favorites, Fred Stanek, sturdy Webster county, Iowa, entry, cracked the crisp brown stalks and rattled the bangboards to become the world's champion corn husker.

Stanek, winning the sport classic of the agricultural world over entries from six other corn belt states, was calm. No trace of emotion was revealed in his face as the judges, after weighing the gleanings—ears he had missed in his rapid march down the long brown rows—declared him winner, having husked 30.34 bushels of corn in 30 minutes. It was his fourth national championship.

At the finish Guy S'mms, Nebraska, who was second, had husked 29.65 bushels, nearly a bushel less than the winner. Theodore Balko and Ray Hansen, both from Minnesota, finished third and fourth respectively.

Stanek, to win his championship, did not equal the world's record of 35.6 bushels, set in 1925 by Elmer Williams of Illinois. But observers agreed he did extremely well under the circumstances. There were fewer ears to the stalk than in average years and the stalks were farther apart.

Septic Tanks Survey Begun

DAVIS.—After attending the meeting of the California State Association of Dairy Inspectors, in Los Angeles last week, H. L. Bolton of the University of California agricultural engineering division, returned as far north as Merced, where he launched a survey of septic tanks on California farms. This survey will cover ten counties and is to be finished by Thanksgiving.

Septic tanks for sewage disposal have been built on hundreds of farms throughout the state, on plans furnished by the agricultural engineering division through the Agricultural Extension Service. How these tanks have functioned and what service they have rendered will be determined by Bolton in his survey.

The counties Bolton plans to visit include Merced, Los Angeles, Orange, San Bernardino, Fresno, Mendocino, Humboldt, Glenn, Tehama and San Joaquin.

The purpose of his visit, Judge L'nabarger announced on his arrival in San Francisco, was to secure a $300,000,000 loan to the Chinese Nationalist government. He refused to discuss the matter today, declaring the proposal should first be submitted to President Hoover.

Jones To Fly East To Scout Notre Dame 11

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 14.—UP—Coach Howard Jones of Southern California, is seriously considering an air trip to Evanston, Ill., to see the Notre Dame Northwestern game on November 22, he admitted today, hoping to get an eyeful of what Coach Knute Rockne's Ramblers have to offer. Southern California has no game scheduled for that week-end and Jones could make the hop missing only two days of practice.

Jones said today that he might start his first string against the University of Hawaii here tomorrow, keeping his regulars on only long enough to run up a lead, and then turning loose his second and third strings.

Coach Otto Klum's Roaring Rainbows went through a stiff workout in the Rose Bowl at Pasadena today preparing for their encounter. The invaders have one of the most cosmopolitan teams in the world, numbering on their squad seventeen native Hawaiians, one Chinese, one Japanese, one Korean, one Portuguese and four Caucasians.

The first string backfield is composed of Nobriga, Hawaiian quarter; Captain Kaakua, left half, Hawaiian. Indie, Portuguese, right half, and Wise, Hawaiian, fullback.

Champion Corn Husker Does His Stuff

NORTON, Kas., Nov. 14.—UP—While 20,000 people stood around the edges of a wide cornfield here today to cheer their favorites, Fred Stanek, sturdy Webster county, Iowa, entry, cracked the crisp brown stalks and rattled the bangboards to become the world's champion corn husker.

Stanek, winning the sport classic of the agricultural world over entries from six other corn belt states, was calm. No trace of emotion was revealed in his face as the judges, after weighing the gleanings—ears he had missed in his rapid march down the long brown rows—declared him winner, having husked 30.34 bushels of corn in 30 minutes. It was his fourth national championship.

At the finish Guy S'mms, Nebraska, who was second, had husked 29.65 bushels, nearly a bushel less than the winner. Theodore Balko and Ray Hansen, both from Minnesota, finished third and fourth respectively.

Stanek, to win his championship, did not equal the world's record of 35.6 bushels, set in 1925 by Elmer Williams of Illinois. But observers agreed he did extremely well under the circumstances. There were fewer ears to the stalk than in average years and the stalks were farther apart.

Canzoneri In Win Over Singer

MADISON SQUARE GARDEN, N. Y., Nov. 14.—UP—Tony Canzoneri, a game little Brooklyn battler, who formerly held the featherweight championship, knocked out Al Singer of the Bronx tonight after 1 minute and six seconds of fighting in the first round, and thereby won the lightweight title to boot.

A right and then a left hook to the jaw, before the fight was fairly under way, sent Singer face down into the resia and marked a surprising victory for a 2 to 1 shot.

Dazed and uncertain as to what had happened, Singer rolled through the ropes and was propped up outside the ring while Canzoneri's hand was raised in token of his victory.

"What's happened?" Singer asked when he finally came to his senses, and the wise boys of Broadway who had backed him at odds of 3 to 1 were asking the same question for a long time afterwards.

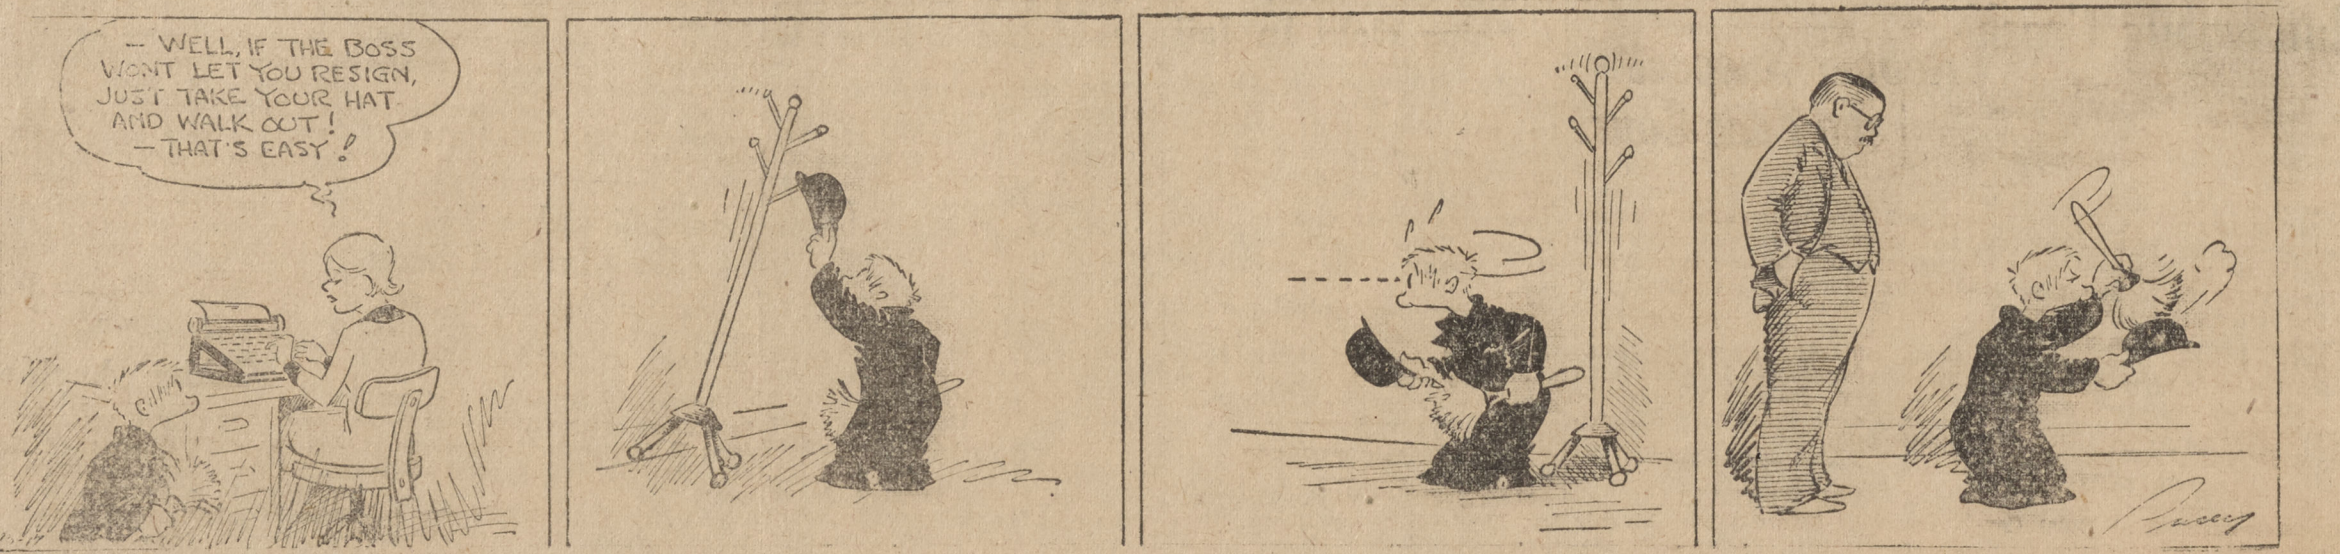

Singer weighed 134 pounds to 132 for Canzoneri and was such a popular favorite that the attendance of some 15,000 fans came as a pleasant surprise to the official, of Madison Square Garden.

HIGH SCHOOL PLAY HERE ENJOYED

The greatest audience ever to witness a Richmond union high school dramatic production was last night agreeably surprised by the professional stage polish of the students who appeared in "The Rejuvenation of Aunt Mary" three act play presented at the semi-annual Richmond union high school student play.

The personality of Vuokko Carlson, in the role Aunt Mary, especially dominated the high school stage last evening. She provoked a laugh a minute as she scolded her young nephew, Jack, decisively stated her opinion of the world in general, declared against the evil of the city, and then turned modern. She also showed fine, humorous sentiment as she repented of her violent scolding and allowed her heart to attain supremacy over her purse. The key to her fine effect upon the audience was her adeptness at changing suddenly from the sublime to the ludicrous, as, in the first act, when she was carrying her scapegrace nephew, she suddenly showed an aversion to the type of hair-oil that he was using.

Edwin Poole, as the erring nephew, Jack, presented an especially fine performance, that added much to the general merit of the production. Jack's troubles of the pocketbook and of the heart provided the main hidden to her view. She gained a times expelled from college, and was involved in a damage suit and a suit for breach of promise all within a short period of time. Meanwhile, his kind hearted aunt was fuming and fretting over the fact that she was the one who would probably pay his debts in the long run.

Aunt Mary was finally persuaded to come to the city by Mitchell, a well-meaning although rather meddlesome character, well played by Phil Carlin. When Aunt Mary did arrive in the city, she was treated to all the luxuries of city life that had been formerly thread of the plot. He was three likings for modern civilization and was not content with the company of Lucinda, a maid, and Joshua, the hired man, when she returned to her 19th century home in the country. However Jack and all his young friends finally arrived at her home unexpectedly, and Aunt Mary was in a perfect bliss and was arrayed in the brightest of modern costumes as the curtain lowered on the third act of the comedy.

The love interest of the play was furnished by the romance of Jack, the nephew, and Betty Burnett. The couple were finally reunited as the curtain lowered after many comic trials and tribulations. The role of Betty Burnett was very capably taken by Claire Smith.

The entire cast of "The Rejuvenation of Aunt Mary" showed the result of long practice and a knowledge of the stage. The charms of Jack Deham-Clover, Mitchell, and Bob Burnett, well portrayed by Paul Miller, Phillip Carlin and Frank Aussez, Marguerite Russell performed a fine character sketch in the role of the girl from Kalamazoo. The comedy pair of Lucinda and Joshua, played by Mary Rogocci and Arthur Lee, were the cause of many chuckles. Lucinda's sharp, satirical antics and Joshua's slow, cumbersome movements added much to the humor of the play. Violet Costa as Daisy Mullins, a villager, William McCloskey as Mr. Stebbins, Aunt Mary's lawyer, Henry Luer as James, the Burnett butler, and Mary Ellen Foley as Janet, the Burnett maid, all added much to the success of the production.

The play was directed with fine results by Mrs. Nellie Behrson of the Richmond union high school faculty. The stage settings, varying from an old-fashioned home to an ultra-modern city dwelling, were arranged by Mrs. Bernice James of the school art department. Theodore Kaplan held the position of stage manager for the play, and Henry Luer directed the handling of the properties. The costumes for the comedy were made by the sewing classes of the high school under the direction of Jennie Gardner, also of the faculty. Furniture for the performance was loaned through the courtesy of Bruener's Furniture company.

LAW PROBES UNDECIDED ON BEER

WASHINGTON, Nov. 14.—UP—Brewers who are reported to be buying beer-making equipment in expectation of an early modification of the Volstead Act are due for a long wait, in the opinion of best informed persons here.

Unless the Wickersham commission makes unexpected speed, there is little likelihood of any prohibition legislation for more than a year. And there is great uncertainty as to what the legislature will be when it does materialize.

Due to inability to reach an agreement, the commission does not now hope to make any important recommendations before the first of the year. It has suspended sittings until November 24. Recently the commission is understood to have been on the point of agreeing to recommendation favoring modification to permit beer. That plan was upset and members are now uncertain what they will report. Many doubt if any recommendation increasing alcoholic content of beverages will be made.

Even in event of a report by January favoring beer, there will be little chance of action at the coming short session of congress which must end March 4. Dry sentiment would insist upon protracted debate. The question likely would go over until the session beginning December, 1931. Whether any such recommendation could get through congress then would depend upon whether the dry forces, who will be in the majority, weaken in the face of statements of private congressmen that there would be some switches of their votes over to modification. Whether there would be enough to give a majority in each house would depend upon how forceful the commission's recommendations proved to be.

Recently information has been given to the commission emphasizing that so-called light beverages have been the chief problem in law violations. Beer and wine bootlegging are represented as being the greater source of gang profits. One of Al Capone's lieutenants in Chicago is reported to have taken in $1,000,000 in three years. Every conceivable phase of the liquor problem has been canvassed by the commission and while conditions are admittedly not satisfactory, the remedy is a matter of much uncertainty.

Suggestions for a constitutional convention have been made but due to the dangers of opening up the federal constitution for general revision, little strength has developed for this plan. It has also been suggested that the Eighteenth Amendment could be repealed by the alternative process of submitting the repeal proposal to state conventions rather than state legisla-

SPECIAL MEET OF CONGRESS THREATENED

WASHINGTON, Nov. 14.—UP—The threat of a special session of congress will be used by western Senators to force passage of the Norris government — operation Muscle Shoals bill, it was definitely indicated today.

As Senator Smith W. Brookhart, Rep., Ind., put it:

"If Herbert Hoover vetoed this bill, he might just as well decide not to run in 1932."

Up In Arms
The Iowa, one of the most vehement farm bloc senators, said other legislation, such as the de-benture, the "lame duck" amendment, and anti-injunction bill, was essential, but that only blockading of the Shoals bill would justify obstruction of appropriation bills for a special session.

Other senators privately indicated they were willing to see a special session if congress fails to deal with certain problems.

This club or threat will be directed chiefly at the powerful administration control of the house, which has blocked the senate bills on railroad consolidation, lame duck sessions, and the Wagner employment program, in addition to Muscle Shoals.

Special Session
Senator Alben Barkley, Dem., Ky., discussing the situation today, said if vital legislation cannot be passed, a special session should not be avoided. There is no sense in forcing a special session just for the sake of having a special session, however, he said.

Senator William E. Borah, one of the leaders of the western bloc, and the man credited with having convinced Hoover he should call the special farm relief tariff session of 1929, voiced similar sentiments in a telegram to the United Press, expressing hope that farm legislation would be enacted.

Barkley's chief comment on the present situation was that it shows powerfully the necessity for adoption of the Norris lame-duck amendment to provide that congress shall meet immediately after it is elected, instead of 13 months later with the intervening time taken up in part by a session of the old congress.

Brookhart in his comment said: "The people are tired of being imposed on by the power trust."

The Iowa's idea of imperative legislation includes the lame duck measure, the farm de-benture bounty plan, the anti-injunction bill, and more money for highways, in addition to Shoals.

But there is as yet no indication the commission intends to consider the advisability of dealing with the basic constitutional amendment.

Al Capone In Attempt To Win Robin Hood Fame

CHICAGO, Nov. 14.—UP—When a robber chief goes far enough in his career of crime, the historians find themselves calling him a pretty good fellow after all.

Robin Hood was a deep-deyed villain who became a hero to the citizens of Sherwood forest. Jesse James became something of a romantic figure in the Kansas cow-towns.

And now the news pops out that good old Scarface Al Capone has joined the ranks of philanthropy by opening a free soup kitchen for Chicago's needy.

Gentle Jesse
Capone's undisputed sway in the underworld is fast making him a semi-legendary figure. And true to tradition, reports would have it that Capone too is a kindly Robin Hood, a gentle Jesse James.

There is no doubt about the soup kitchen. It is there on shabby South State street below the loop. Hot food and coffee is passed out to anyone who is hungry. There is plenty of food and a corps of hard-boiled gentlemen to pass it out.

The hard-boiled gentlemen, incidentally, are doing their best to support the Capone legend of kindness.

Al's Place
"Sure," Mr. Capone runs this place," said one of the attendants. The soup kitchen is hardly more than a block from the Lexington hotel where Capone has a suite of armored rooms.

It costs about $300 a day to operate the free restaurant, but testimony in federal Judge Woodward's court today indicated that Capone won't particularly miss it if he actually is the soup kitchen owner.

The cashier of his three most luxurious gambling palaces testified that Capone had a net profit of from $25,000 to $30,000 a month from his gambling activities. The trial concerned income tax charges against John Christ who handles the gambling concessions for Capone.

NEW YORK, Nov. 14.—UP—David Belasco, noted producer, has advised the League of New York Theaters that he will no longer retain membership.

The league replied that Belasco could not effectively retire under the terms of his membership. His resignation, it is understood, was due in part to dissatisfaction with present methods of distributing theater tickets here.

TROLLEY CRASH VICTIM'S LEG AMPUTATED

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 14.—UP—In an effort to save the life of Arthur Anderson, 28, motor man of the municipal streetcar that crashed into another car in Twin Peaks tunnel Wednesday, his left leg was amputated above the knee.

The amputation was the second such operation performed on victims of the collision.

Tom Watson, 13, brother-in-law of Herbert Hoover, Jr., was reported "doing nicely" at St. Luke's hospital today, following a similar operation Wednesday.

Robert J. Wren, fellow worker in the municipal service, volunteered for a blood transfusion to enable motor man Anderson to regain his strength after the operation.

Others of the 13 crash victims who received more or less serious injuries, were reported well out of danger, and most of them were released from hospitals and allowed to go to their homes.

The accident came when conductor C. A. Lund of the first car backed his car in the tunnel to search for a dropped 50 cent piece, and the car driven by Anderson telescoped into it.

The conductor and motorman of the first car will be held to answer to charges of negligence before the board of works.

Mountain States In Grip Of Storm

The storm was general in Montana, the weather bureau reported. Temperatures ranged from 20 degrees to zero. The mercury descended to 6 degrees below zero in parts of Albert and British Columbia.

Snow also fell in sections of Utah and Wyoming. A three-inch blanket of white covered Salt Lake City. It was the first snowfall of the season there. The lowest temperature in the Mountain States was reported at Winnemucca, Nev., where the mercury dropped to zero.

EXTINCT FORM OF BIG AUK GIVEN U. C.

BERKELEY, Nov. 14.—A complete, composite skeleton of the Great Auk, Garefowl, or "Plantus Impennis," that once covered the rocks of certain north Atlantic islets in hundreds of thousands, but which now is as extinct as the Dodo bird, has just been added to the collections of the University of California museum of vertebrate zoology.

The specimen acquired by the university, one of the few complete skeletons in existence, is a gift of the Museum of Comparative Zoology at Cambridge, Mass., through its director, Dr. Thomas Babour, to Prof. Joseph Grinnell, curator of the California museum.

Largest Diving Bird
The Great Auk, also known as the north Atlantic Penguin, was one of the largest diving birds of modern times, standing 22 to 30 inches high, and was the only North American bird incapable of flight. Its wings were too short to support the bird in the air, but were used to great advantage in swimming. There are stories to the effect that an Auk could outdistance a six-oared boat in a free for all race.

In appearance the Auks resembled castaway missionaries dressed in black frock coats and white shirts. Their feet, equipped with their tails for the Auk stood erect, giving them still more the impression of little men in full dress. To add further to their dignity they would stand in long lines on promontories of rock and being unable to fly would waddle away with displeased grunts when men approached.

Swam Thousands of Miles

Although they regularly swam thousands of miles, as far south as Florida, they were more given to parliamentary sessions on rocks than to motion, and this proved their undoing. The explorer Cartier first described them on rocks off the coast of Newfoundland in 1534, and they proved so amenable to murder, that for three centuries thereafter they were objects of slaughter by fishermen, sealers and others. They were valuable for human food, the feather trade, fish bait, and even as a source of fuel, for their bodies were layered with oily fat.

Navy Plans To Aid In Search

SEATTLE, Nov. 14.—UP—Two United States navy amphibian planes, have been ordered sent here from San Diego to aid in the search for two planes and six men lost somewhere in northern British Columbia.

Arnel Eckmann, Alaska Airways pilot, the only persistently serious searcher, who has spent more than a week in the region between Ketchikan, Alaska, and Vancouver Island, wired for help today. He said his plane needed repairs, and that one man could do little toward combing the country for the missing persons.

Tales That Tables Tell

By Alma Zaiss

Copyright Press Publishing Company (New York World) 1930

THE combination living-dining room is one of our most popular institutions; essentially a product of the modern day; and no one cares to deny the allegation. But in the presence of such an original setting as the one illustrated we do rather question whether the pioneers of the movement foresaw the great chance for individuality that was to follow in its wake.

In the first days of its flourishing adventure, for example, it is doubtful if a single craftsman visioned such a trim and versatile combination table as this modern metal piece with its top of jet black bakelite. Else why were the bulky "live-dine" and "two-in-one" tables created?

And confess now... what hostess then dreamed of setting the living-dining room table in the unconventional manner shown... back to the wall and guests ranged along one side only? Or who considered matching china and linen to the wall decoration... to say nothing of using a long runner in the off-center position illustrated in the picture? To the past decade we owe due credit for the utilitarian aspect of the living-dining room. But to the modern designer and artist let us give congratulations for the refinements and subtle touches, which have made of this mode of dining not only a convenience, but a most attractive ceremony.

In the illustration, the daring younger generation will be quick to see many suggestions for their own modern living-dining rooms. So will the sophisticated hostess who is adept at introducing extraordinary details into conventional surroundings. Such a table might be arranged before two close-together windows or a group of three. With modern draperies for the decorative background instead of the pictures the effect would be equally charming.

Or the long, narrow table might be placed against the wall in the dining foyer which is an innovation in many modern apartments and which provides a topic that is interesting enough to discuss at length another time. Those who are fortunate enough to have sun rooms or porches may also consider the delight of dining close to the out of doors, and note how excellent are the proportions of such a table for the average sun room.

Although its message may seem to be conveyed in terms most modernistic, in reality this inviting table tells its story in a universal language that can easily be understood by homes of different types.

When You Shop for Rugs

A RUDIMENTARY knowledge of rugs is a valuable aid in the purchase of these necessities for the home. There are five main types of weaves made in this country—Wilton, Chenille, Axminster, Velvet and Tapestry.

Wilton rugs and carpets are made exclusively upon jacquard looms, done in both wool and worsted qualities, the latter being the more expensive. The weave is very tight, and the hardest and most resilient yarns are used in its construction. The worsted type possesses the best wearing attributes, while the better grades of wools also have great durability.

A portion of wool or worsted is buried in the back of a Wilton rug, giving it resiliency or cushion back and durability or buried value. Velvet rugs, which appear somewhat the same on the surface, have no yarn buried in the back.

The number of wires or rows to the inch showing on the back of a Wilton rug is an evidence of its quality, the high ratio being more than eleven rows. The character of the yarn, the pitch and the height of the pile are factors to watch in purchasing.

Most expensive and luxurious in weaves, is the Chenille, offering the widest range of possibilities as to depth of pile, design and coloring. It also stands apart in the fact that it may be woven in widths up to thirty feet without a seam, and without cutting can be made to fit into alcoves and around fireplaces. Chenille is made with pile up to an inch and a half deep, possessing a soft, quiet, resilient quality that makes each step upon it a satisfaction. This is due to the heavy cushion back. Chenille is made from lustrous wool or worsted yarns of the finest selected grade.

Next in quality and price range to Wiltons are Axminster carpets and rugs, made only from wool yarn, the weave not being tight enough to permit the use of hard surface worsted yarn. Even so, the pile usually is deeper than that of Wilton fabrics. Seven or more rows to the inch will be found on the backs of the better Axminsters.

In general, Velvets cost less than Axminsters, being made in a number of various qualities. On the surface, these have somewhat the appearance of Wiltons, sometimes are called Wilton-Velvets, but there is no such weave. Velvet is woven on a common cloth type loom without the jacquard device, and the designs are either printed on the yarns before weaving or after the carpet or rug is woven.

On the same type of loom as Velvets, the Tapestry carpet or rug is woven. If a round wire or row is used then it is a Tapestry. When a flat pile wire is used with a knife and the loops are cut by the knife and the plush effect of Velvets is produced.

CA DISH CA DAY

Copyright Press Publishing Company (New York World) 1930

So long as there is a great variety of fresh vegetables in the market at very reasonable prices the housewife needs exercise little ingenuity to provide tempting and satisfying luncheons. Vegetable soup, creamed or made with leftover or canned chicken broth, served with crisp, homemade muffins or tea biscuits and followed by a simple fruit dessert is an ideal luncheon for these fall days.

A number of correspondents have asked me to suggest some unusual vegetable soups. "I've given the children celery soup, corn soup and carrot soup until they must have the sight of them," one correspondent writes. "And yet I cannot think of anything else except spinach, which they hate. If I had a chance to get out to luncheon occasionally I am sure the menu card of any good cafe would remind me of many delicacies that I have, for the moment, forgotten."

I am not so sure of that. Off-hand I can think of three delicious soups which I have seldom found on cafe menus. For instance, there is oyster plant soup. Have you ever eaten that? To make it you merely boil the oyster plant very tender, and to a cup of crushed oyster plant you add a thin white sauce made of a pint of milk, two tablespoons each of butter and flour, seasoning and a little minced parsley.

Broccoli soup, made of one cup of rich chicken stock, one cup of thick white sauce, one cup of water in which broccoli was cooked, one cup of broccoli pulp forced through a steve and a few of the broccoli flowerets make a soup that is a great favorite at Italian parties. Then there is cream of artichoke, first choice of many gourmets. Ordinarily expensive, this is now within the reach of the modest budget, for artichokes are plentiful in the market at this season and reasonably priced. Only the artichoke bottoms are used in soup; it requires three large ones or four medium-sized ones for one pint of thin cream sauce. These do not need to be forced through a sieve. When tender they can be mashed with a fork.

For ordinary occasions, crackers or bread sticks may be served with these soups, but for a special occasion try these crisp cheese biscuits. They are equally good to serve with salad, too.

CHEESE BISCUIT
1½ cups flour
¾ teaspoon salt
2 teaspoons baking powder
2 tablespoons shortening
4 tablespoons grated cheese
¾ cup milk

Sift the flour, measure, then sift again with salt and baking powder. Cut in shortening, mixing with the finger tips until flour has the appearance of coarse meal. Stir in grated cheese and add milk, stirring vigorously for a minute or two until dough is stiff. Pat out on floured board to one-half inch thickness, cut very small, and bake in a hot oven, 425 degrees, for about twelve minutes, or until slightly browned. Parmesan or some other highly flavored cheese is better for these biscuits than the mild flavored cheeses are.

Completing the Early American Scheme

By Alma Zaiss

MORE THAN ORDINARY CHARM IS GIVEN TO THIS CORNER BY THE CHAIR IN ITS SLIP OF COPPER-COLORED TOILE WHICH ECHOES DARK TONES IN THE MAPLE.

PROBLEM NO. 1

Dear Miss Zaiss:
I would appreciate greatly your advice on the decoration of my bedroom. I have a maple set consisting of a four-poster bed, vanity, bureau and chest of drawers. Would you suggest colonial treatment? I have thought about chintz for the bed but as I would like to cover two big chairs in the same room, I wouldn't like to have too much of the same material. What could I use for wraps and covers for the vanity, chest of drawers and bureau? Would a plain spread be better, and figured material for the drapes and chairs, or vice versa? Or perhaps you would suggest something else.

I have read your articles and have found them most helpful. I am inclosing a stamped self-addressed envelope and wish to thank you for my advice you might send me.
MRS. D. F. F.

Toile Furnishes the Theme for This Room in Copper and Blue

MUCH as the Early American scheme appeals to those who appreciate the important part these quaint old pieces played in the home-furnishing history of the nation, we sometimes forget that attractive plans can be based on a foundation other than chintz. The toile and the old quilt patterns are too frequently neglected for the more familiar fabric, which, while always fresh and interesting, is not the only suitable material.

Mrs. F. has not expressed a definite wish for a scheme that does not include chintz (as have several readers asking for advice in decoration). But to serve the general story we shall assume that she too will enjoy following us along lines that lead to a scheme that has a slightly different flavor.

No floor plan has been submitted with this problem; consequently no arrangement can be suggested. Reference to the Early American corner illustrated, however, will put us in just the proper frame of mind to visualize the homelike charm and quaintness of the plan to be outlined for Mrs. F.

In the picture these simple pieces patterned after Early American examples in mellow toned maple have the gift of being friendly and charming without being costly. The chair, in its copper-toned toile costume, is particularly attractive and may well be used as the keynote for the larger color scheme. Of the two slip covers to be made for the easy chairs in Mrs. F.'s room one could be of similar toile. Then, accepting this material as the first step in color and pattern, let us use for contrast the peculiar shades of blue and green that are so delightful with rust, henna or copper.

First, the walls. Let us tint them or paint them the very palest shade of greenish blue, verging on sea blue as we see it near the very crest of a wave. For the floor we may use a very soft, mellow, plain carpet, which will give us the fascinating combination of green-blue and blue-green as a background for the warm reddish-brown tones of the maple and the copper colored toile design on its deep cream ground.

The toile may be used for overdraperies, and for glass curtains under the toile we would have ruffled dotted swiss or scrim crossed over and tied back at either side. For the bedspread nothing seems to suit our fancy so well as patchwork, a lovely old patchwork quilt made of unbleached muslin on which is stitched a design in blues and greens. Or variegated

If the vanity is of natural wood it needs no cover, nor do the tops of the bureau and chest, unless Mrs. F. wishes to use beneath an important centerpiece such as a bit of old porcelain or colonial glass a small mat of cream-colored crocheted. At least one easy chair would enjoy having a nearby table to hold a lamp, books, the sewing basket and smoking tray. And if there is a convenient corner for it, a corner cabinet, either of maple or painted like the woodwork, would be extremely decorative and convenient for books and a brace.

Lamps of pewter, brass or colonial glass with simple shades would be best for this room, and pictures should also be in keeping with the scheme. Such quaint subjects as we find in old Godey prints, silhouettes, old engraving, the botanical prints, ship prints and reproductions of ancient maps belong to the collection of interesting and not-too-expensive pictures that add so much to the charm of the Early American room.

This seems to answer Mrs. F.'s several questions, and we shall now depart from the homelike scene and visit an entirely different bedroom.

PROBLEM NO. 2

Dear Miss Zaiss:
Can you please advise me as to redecorating my bedroom? The furniture is of French walnut and I like the powder blue and peach chiffon velvet combination for bedspread and overdrapes with glass curtains of eggshell chiffon. Do you think well of my taste in window decoration or have you any suggestions? It will be most kind of you to tip me as I have had no experience in the line whatever.
(Mrs. M. W.)

Elaborate Fabrics Require a Similar Background

WE are asked to pass upon Mrs. W.'s taste and to answer a question about correct curtains.

Well...In a luxurious home where rooms are large and the appointments are very gorgeous from the moment one steps over the threshold until the four ends in the least room of the house the peach and powder blue chiffon velvet combination for the bedroom might be in good taste and very lovely. In a less pretentious home, however, we should prefer something simpler.

In other words, rich silks, satins and velvets should be used against the proper background. More...they should reflect the spirit, the habits, the every-day life of the family in order to be in the best of taste. We have no means of knowing how elaborate or how simple Mrs. W.'s home is as a whole may be, and therefore cannot give her a definite answer on this particular point.

The French walnut furniture, however, sounds very attractive and is in keeping with a more or less luxurious scheme. If the home as a whole corresponds, then the velvet spread and the eggshell chiffon glass curtains would seem to be good selections. As to velvet overcurtains, in the opinion of Mrs. Amy Somers Phillips, one of the consultant decorators for the Home Decoration Department, the better choice would be a very handsome two-tone or three-tone brocade. If blue predominates in the spread, the peach may be most prominent in the curtains. Or the brocade could include all colors in its pattern, perhaps with blue predominating.

Helen MacKellar Tells How She Combined Reducing Systems in a Successful Fight With Flesh

By Kay Merrill

Copyright Press Publishing Company (New York World) 1930

THERE are ways and ways of reducing, as anyone in this age of svelte fashions and svelter figures can tell you by enumerating several of them immediately. But when it becomes necessary to lose fifteen pounds in exactly three weeks, then it's a feat the accomplishment of which is indeed news.

Such a reducing regime, necessarily disciplined into a rigidly systematic process with not the faintest concession given to the horrible enemy, "fat," was recently undergone by Helen MacKellar, the stage star, who had to melt down in the short space of three weeks from 129 to 114 pounds. This was necessary in view of the fact that a movie contract was offered her if it test showed her the slim, alluring figure heroines of the screen are supposed always to be.

How Miss MacKellar achieved this feat, at the same time maintaining the vigorous health for which she is known, was given by her in a reducing "game" she originated, which consists of this simple recipe: "Take the best parts of various reducing methods, mix well, add a huge dose of sense of humor," she says facetiously, "and take regularly during the prescribed period."

Instead of adhering strictly to one form of reducing, with the resultant monotony, as so many women do, she chose the best features of several dietaries and sets of reducing exercises, and created a game for herself, she explained.

"The first two days of the three weeks I lived on a soup diet," she said. "The rest of the time I included in my diet vegetables and eggs as much as I wanted, concocting salads for lunches and dinners, over which I poured a mineral oil dressing I made myself."

"Then, twice a day, preferably before lunch or dinner, I'd turn on the radio and do a tap dance routine to keep me lithe and agile. Thus I varied my exercises as well as my diet, thereby achieving a pleasant way to roll off those extra pounds by making a game out of it."

"And now look at me!" Miss MacKellar turned slowly around to show a svelte, slim figure, which she then justified her three weeks' reducing "game."

You and Your Child

By Irma Morris

Copyright Press Publishing Company (New York World) 1930

Parent Substitutes
COME along, children," said the sweet-voiced, pretty kindergarten teacher, and all eyes were turned to her. He clung frantically to his mother, resisting all her persuasions, threats and force. "I'll have to let him stay with me," the mother apologized. "He's so used to me. I never leave him with anyone."

"Never leaving a child is unhealthy both for him and his mother. The child becomes too dependent, too emotionally tied to his parent; while the mother's interest and concern become too much concentrated upon the child. Every mother should leave her little one for a few hours a day, if she possibly can."

Sometimes several mothers can club together and arrange to have a college student who understands child care and their recreational needs take a small group to the neighborhood park for an hour or so every day. When the funds for this are lacking the mothers themselves might take turns in taking care of the little ones.

Somewhat, in some way, mothers should get a few hours "off" occasionally. They must, however, be very careful that their substitutes are properly qualified! Many mothers get some freedom by turning their children over to the care of nurses or maids of all work. And, often, these mothers do not consider carefully enough whether the persons to whom they are intrusting the children are capable of handling them! A cook's qualifications are usually most carefully considered, but many people think that anyone who is reliable and honest can "look after" the children. In consequence many little run-abouts are kept confined in go-carts during long, boring afternoons, because they are much easier to manage in this way, thus leaving the nurse maid ample opportunities to chat with her friends. A mother often wonders why junior looks so peaked and listless, in spite of the fact that he is out of doors so much!

Often a mother is puzzled because her young one is so restless at night. Could she hear the many horrible threats her nurse maid is constantly using, in order to manage her charge more easily, this mother would not be so much at sea.

Then, again, how many of these nurses revel in exercising authority! "Do this," "Do that," "I said you should," one hears on all sides. This is easy to understand, for in most cases, have been in dependent positions for years, constantly taking orders from others. Naturally they enjoy being in a superior position, in laying down the law to little children!

Most of these "parent substitutes" are good-natured, kindly people, whose mistakes are made entirely out of ignorance. But we should guard our children from these and other worse mistakes, even more carefully than we do from contagious diseases!

CHEST DRIVE TO CLOSE HERE MONDAY

The Community Chest campaign is being pressed energetically with the object of holding a final report luncheon on Monday that will bring the effort to a close, according to announcement yesterday by W. W. Scott, chairman.

Field workers would prefer to devote their energies to canvassing their districts than to meet in daily reports gatherings, it was said by Scott, and further rallies of this nature will be withheld until next Monday.

Organization of the inside soliciting groups in the manufacturing plants has been perfected and collection of money from this source is going forward satisfactorily. Reports will be had from this source next Monday, but it is not expected that the work in the plants will be finished by that time, according to Scott. He anticipated that collections will be forthcoming from the plant employees all next week.

The major portions of the campaign will be concluded next Monday, according to the present plans. Final reports are to be had from the women's residential divisions, the foreign corporations, the central committee and the business divisions, all of whom are now on the last lap in their efforts to raise the desired quota for the financing of the six Richmond welfare agencies.

Scott urged all persons who are approached by Chest solicitors to subscribe to the limit of their ability, giving a portion in cash and pledging the remainder to be paid in installments throughout the year.

Doctor Arrested In Suicide Of Society Matron

PORTLAND, Ore., Nov. 14.—UP—Fingerprints found upon the knife with which Mrs. Leone Bowles, society matron, stabbed herself were so faint that it would be impossible to compare them with those of any of the principals in the affair, it was said here today.

The fingerprint theory was also materially weakened by the fact that several persons handled the knife before authorities gained control of it.

Testimony by Nelson C. Bowles, the dead woman's husband, and his former personal stenographer, Miss Loucks, as to Mrs. Bowles' suicide, contained some discrepancies, and authorities took the fingerprints of all the principals in the case.

The announcement by fingerprint expert Payne, however, dispels practically all hope that any information can be gained through marks upon the knife.

Dr. Paul B. Cooper and Dr. C. P. Pynn, Portland physicians, were formally arrested today, charged with removing the bodies of Mrs. Bowles and Michael Laffaw from the death scenes without consent of the county coroner.

Laffaw, aged night-watchman, was found on a bed at his home here, with a revolver lying on the floor near his feet. Two shells in the gun had been exploded. The complaints were issued after coroner Earl Smith had conferred with District Attorney Myers, and were signed by the coroner.

In neither of the two cases was the coroner's office notified by the physicians, Dr. Smith said. Both bodies were removed to undertaking parlors before the coroner could view them at the death scenes.

In the Laffaw case, Dr. Pynn, who was attending, signed the death certificate as one of "accidental death."

Dr. Smith said that as soon as a physician finds a case of unnatural death, he is required by law to notify the coroner, without removing the body.

Lone Bandit Gets $200,000 In Gems

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 14.—UP—A bandit, escaped with $200,000 in unmounted diamonds late today after slugging M. Reinhold, president of a wholesale jewelry firm, in the company's downtown office.

The bandit walked into the office, passed Reinhold's secretary, Dorothy Kirk, 22, and confronted the jeweler in his private office with a pistol. He struck Reinhold over the head, rendering him unconscious, trussed him with adhesive tape and disappeared with the diamonds.

Miss Kirk, who said she had been unaware of the attack, found Reinhold after the stranger departed. There have been a number of diamond robberies here of late and police believe a Kansas City gang is at work.

Man Shot By Girl Fights For His Life

SANTA ROSA, Nov. 14.—UP—A wife and a stenographer, each 21 and each the mother of a five months old baby, held opposite opinions tonight about the shooting of Richard H. Procter, 23, who was in critical condition in Wheeler hospital at Cloverdale, about 30 miles north of here.

"If he didn't try to attack me why do you suppose I shot him?" Mrs. Charlotte Hindley, the stenographer, Eureka divorcee, asked, "For target practice?"

Mr. Hindley was held in the Sonoma county jail here.

"I believe my husband when he says he is innocent of those terrible charges made against him by that Hindley woman," Mrs. Procter said.

To which Mrs. Hindley replied: "I am sorry for his wife, but I don't suppose she will ever believe the truth. Wife's usually don't."

Mrs. Hindley said she wanted to return to her mother in Eureka. An objection to this offered by the wife.

"I'm asking authorities to charge that woman with attempted murder and with stealing my husband's automobile," Mrs. Procter said.

Procter, a magazine salesman of San Francisco, was found on the highway near Geyserville suffering from painful bullet wounds. He said he did not know why he had been shot.

Mrs. Hindley, according to authorities, said her mother gave her a revolver when she left Eureka so that she might protect herself.

ALWAYS CARRIED GUN MOTHER DECLARED

EUREKA, Nov. 14.—UP—"The poor girl," Mrs. C. H. Bruce, mother of Mrs. Charlotte Hindley, said here today when informed her daughter was in jail at Santa Rosa on a charge of shooting her employer.

"She had hoped so much it would be a good job and pay her enough to care for the baby."

Mrs. Bruce said her daughter carried the revolver whenever she went on long trips. She bought it while working for the telephone company at night, the mother said and when she came home early in the morning she carried the revolver.

FEAR FELT FOR FOREIGNERS IN PERU

LIMA, Peru, Nov. 14.—UP—A dangerous situation prevailed in the disturbed mining regions east of Lima today, where three foreigners and a number of native miners were killed in riots earlier this week.

Fear was expressed for the safety of 24 foreigners still in the Cerro de Pasco region, 125 miles up in the Andes mountains, where infuriated natives broke out in anti foreign riots. These foreigners included four officials of the American-owned Cerro de Pasco Copper corporation.

The four men are Bernard Cooley, Raymond Spillsbury, Harry Peet and George Sullivan. The 34 who remained include in all 13 Americans, 13 British and 8 of other nationalities. No word had been received of them, and refugees who were evacuated following the riots indicated their position among the hostile natives was serious.

Picked troops patrolled all mining towns in the disturbed area today.

Martial law continued in effect but Lima was quiet all day. The censorship established 24 hours ago was lifted.

Mine officials said they had had no reports of sabotage in the mines and that the pumps were running, preventing flooding and great loss. The mines have been closed since earlier this week, when the infuriated native workers ran amuck.

The refugees evacuated by order of the company officials during the height of the trouble Wednesday indicated the temper of the natives was far from quieted. They urged that the four should be brought to Lima before the company discussed with the Peruvian government the possibility of resumption of work in the mines, and the return to the mine area of the evacuated foreigners.

The three men killed by the miners were to be buried at Malpasio today, refugees said. The men were John William Chapman of Chicago and E. L. Tripp of Brooklyn, both Americans, and William Witterguber, 33, a Hungarian.

The country had returned to normal in most sections. The general strike ended and Lima was calm. The censorship was lifted.

The authorities, nevertheless, rounded up 65 extremists in Lima and Callao in the past 24 hours, and 42 of them were sent to prison. The riots, a result of labor agitation, followed the arrest earlier in the week of 33 agitators among the mine workers in the La Oroya district, so the reaction to this second round-up was awaited with some concern.

FURNITURE CO. WILL OPEN NEW STORE

At nine o'clock this morning the Central Furniture company will open for business at its new location, 1234 Macdonald avenue.

Work of remodeling the store has been under way for the past several weeks, and an attractive interior is to be presented customers and visitors today.

The public has been especially invited to inspect the new store and its stock of furniture. The present store has three times the space that the old store had, and is extremely well lighted both during the day and at night.

For nine years the company has successfully supplied furniture wants of its many customers, and plans are now under way to provide the highest class of household necessities obtainable on any market.

A room where used furniture is on display is also a feature of the new store. Persons making purchases of any of the goods on display will be given tags which represent 10 percent of the purchase price of any other commodity that may be taken by this person or anyone else for credit on other purchases.

Mail Pilot Sets New Speed Mark

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 14.—With an average speed of 159 miles an hour over the air-mail route between here and Salt Lake City, Allan Barrie, pilot for Western Air Express is believed to have set a new record for tri-motored ships today.

With six passengers and 400 pounds of mail Barrie made the trip from Salt Lake in four hours and six minutes.

Two Killed In Airplane Crash

SAN DIEGO, Nov. 14.—UP—After an all night search, the bodies of two naval fliers killed when their plane crashed in a fog near Fallbrook, 50 miles north of here, were found early today.

The men killed were Lieutenant W. B. Hollingsworth, Coronado, and aviation machinist's mate A. O. Pierson, Oakland, Ill. The plane was accompanied by another pilot, by Lieutenant R. L. Fuller, which also crashed in the fog without injury to Fuller or his mechanic, J. M. Woods.
